Were the test users able to easily start the program?

Yes, once general instructions were given, all testers were able to run the program.

Did the test users find the GUI intuitive to use?

Most users found the interface to be simple and well laid out. Some suggested a color scheme change.

Was the setup time equal to or less than setting up the existing workout system?

Yes, with the current implementation the setup did take less time than the existing system, but with further development and the introduction of additional features, this will need to be retested.

Will the system be able to provide the same functionality as the current system?

Yes, once fully implemented the system will be able to provide the same functionality as the current system and will provide additional functionality.

What changes do you want to see?

The software doesn't do anything. Implement what you said it would do.
